An introduction to our wine list

Let's make no bones about it: we are proud of our wine list. It has taken us over 20 years of constant attention to get it where it is today. So what is all the fuss about? every restaurant has a wine list...

You don't want a list that's composed of just one merchant's selection of wines. Using one can make life easy for the restaurant owner but no merchant has all the best wines. We have sourced wines from all the top wine merchants and imported many of our wines from the vineyards themselves. Our list of suppliers sounds like a roll call of the great and good, including: Berkmann, Hellamshire Wine Shipping, Les Caves de Pyrene, Boncoeur, Castillon, Cockburn and Campbell, Corney and Barrow, Domaine Direct, Enotria Wines, Field and Fawcett, Firth and Co., Hallgarten Wines, Jurgen Kaiser, John Kelly of Clifford, O.W.Loeb, LMVH, Maisons Marques and Domaines, McKinley Vintners, Moet Chandon, Pagenham and Pratt, Steep Hill Wines, Tanners of Shrewsbury, Thorman Hunt and Pol Roger.

Creating a wine list is like building a football team: buying the best wines when they are ready for drinking is a very expensive option, but with a good youth team policy buying the wines as they are first released, when they are at their least expensive, makes better economic sense. Eventually, you have wines from good vintages that are ready to drink and cost the customer what an unready wine from a mediocre vintage costs in most restaurants. A lot of the best wines are offered young and then disappear into the cellars of the wealthy, never appearing on wine merchants' lists, never mind restaurants. You need a good scouting team who look at the widest range of wines possible from all over the world. This means using good merchants' advice; attending as many tastings, often in London, as possible; and keeping abreast of wine gossip on various web sites and magazines; and reading the opinions of gurus like Robert Parker Jr., Allan Meadows and Jancis Robinson, and not slavishly following their numbers, but recognising their prejudices and enthusiasms.

We have done all this hard, difficult and time consuming work, ruining our livers, dicing with wine slurpers' elbow and casting a snook at gout and apoplexy, with a true dedication to our calling.

Happy Drinking!

Did you know...

Champagne has often been a female business. Various widows ran the big houses during eras when it was unusual to see a woman in charge. She may not have been the first (widow Soyez came before her), but Mrs. Clicquot remains the archetype. Her wine was even called La Veuve ("The Widow")

247 Salon 1999 Natural sophistication! 37, the final count. There have only been 37 years worthy of Salon Champagne during the entire 20th century. 37 vintages, all different, all sublime, all unique, like this exceptional Salon Champagne, for which the word “one” is of prime importance: originally the champagne of one man, Aimé Salon, cultivated on one stretch of land, the Côte des Blancs, from one vineyard, Mesnil-sur-Oger, from one type of grape, Chardonnay and one year. 1999 is the thirty-seventh and last vintage of the 20th century: a wild nature, to be tamed, with power and expectancy, looking to a glorious future, still imminent. Mouth-filling, with a creamy, featherlight mousse and the vivacious chalky minerality of the Mesnil terroir, there is tremendous tension and self-assurance to this champagne, which remains nevertheless delicate and enigmatic. As ever finely wrought, Salon 1999 rides the knife-edge of finesse and power with characteristic panache.		595.00

273 Delamotte 2008 Champagne Delamottes Grand Cru Blanc de Blancs 2008 is all about balance - its power, finesse and purity co-exist flawlessly, each enhancing the other. Well-structured, complex but delicate at the same time, Delamotte 2007 is accessible in youth but will age beautifully, if you can resist it that long.		168.00

He left the family domaine at Boucasse in 1980, dissatisfied by his fathers lack of ambition for quality, and set up on his own. In a mere 20 years, Brumont has succeeded by a combination of breathtaking chutzpah and brilliant winemaking in creating the largest fine wine domaine in the south-west and establishing without a doubt that Tannat is a first division quality grape variety. The basic Boucasse (70 percent Tannat) and Montus (80 percent Tannat) are matured in 50% new wood, and are very fine. An exceptional wine. Beautiful, deep-red ruby colour, with the bright sheen of great Burgundies. Primary notes of red fruit dominate, such raspberry, blackberry. There are hints of complexity with smoky flavours evolving towards liquorice. The body is firm without being rough, well meshed without being heavy. There remains a final and most pleasing sensation of harmony, fullness and delicate tannins, as the wine lingers on the palate.

Did you know...

During the late 19th century, several villages in the Cote d'Or were awarded the right to add to their name(s) of the grands crus produced in their locality. Thus, in 1882, Chambolle took the name Chambolle-Musigny, Gevrey became Gevrey-Chambertin, both Puligny and Chassagne villages share the name of their grand cru, the famous Montrachet and Ladoix, while Vosne has naturally benefitted from the reputation of Romanee.

FRANCE

Rhone

White Rhone, with the possible exception of Condrieu, is very unfashionable, partly as a result of grape varieties few have heard of, partly the often overblown style and partly its cost. All this is a shame because the well made wines are lost to most white wine drinkers. Our white Chateauneuf will surprise and delight the palates of those open minded enough to try it. There is proper Chateauneuf du Pape from serious growers that is getting more expensive by the second and cheap, dilute, over- sugared wines tasting of dirty old wood.

Cotes de Bordeaux Castillon

- 607 Domaine L' Aurage 2010  95.00
Opaque plum, firm to a tight scarlet rim, this presents a nose reminiscent of fresh grape must, with a refreshing, sherbet lift. Very primary and fresh, it is attractively weighted and silk-textured, black and red fruit enveloping beautifully rounded tannins. Opulent and powerful, this nonetheless maintains an elegance throughout and a precision which persists through to a sustained, poised finish.

Sauternes and Barsac - 1st Growth

- 173 Rieussec 1999  65.00
This wine has a rich, deep golden hue in the glass. The nose is just fabulous, and the aromas are the epitome of all that is botrytis, with a heady concoction of scents that sit somewhere between lemons, oranges and pineapples at one end, and honey, toffee and caramel at the other. The palate starts off creamy and rich, with a fine roasted orange seam from the botrytis, delightfully bitter grip as offered by a very good Seville orange marmalade, and delicious sweetness

Pale lemon colored, the 2014 Climens reveals wonderful botrytis-inspired scents defining the nose with a core of ripe peaches, honeydew melon and lemon marmalade plus wafts of candle wax and orange blossom. SPAIN

Does any country give such value and diversity in red wines as Spain? We collect the ultra traditional in fine vintages from La Rioja Alta and Vega Sicilia and the up and coming from areas like Priorat and Castilla Leon. Most of these are not supermarket cheap because of the costs of production but they more than stand up to more expensive wines from more well known sources. They are also food wines which, strangely enough, are meant to be drunk with food, which is not the same as saying that they are too tannic to drink on their own. Modern Spanish whites made from the Viura grape can be dull or bland but for real character try the old fashioned VinaGravonia, with its savoury flavours of wood or the mouth-watering minerality of the Albarino.

599 Conde de Valdemar BMB 1983  165.00
At a recent wine tasting this wine was a shining star at the surprise of everybody .

La Rioja Alta: is unquestionably one of the top bodegas of Rioja, traditional in style but not afraid of innovation. The names of the two top wines 904 and 890 refer to the dates of the founding of the company in 1890 and to it becoming a limited company in 1904. We are proud of the wines we list from this bodega, especially the older fine vintage.

Did you know...

Vineyard yields in Spain are among the lowest in the world.

The average yield is just 1.4 tons per acre (25hl/ha). This figure is remarkably low, especially when compared with that of neighbouring countries (4.2 tons per acre/70hl/ha on average in France). It can be attributed to the presence of very old vines in the various growing areas, as well as the rigorous climatic conditions that make life quite tough for the vine - but to the benefit of the wine.

NEW ZEALAND

Now reeling a little from over-production the Sauvignon Blanc success story in New Zealand from a standing start in the early eighties to world domination in the last decade or so, is quite extraordinary. And they look as though they might do a similar job with Pinot Noir and even follow that with Syrah, sorry Shiraz. As to the question do New Zealand wines age well, the 1993 Cabernet from the Goldwater Estate in the North Island can answer very much in the affirmative.

More than 90 percent of New Zealand wines are sealed with a screwcap. Beginning in 2001, work with this closure has convinced producers that it is the best solution for wines renowned for their freshness and aromatic purity. They have even formed an association called “New Zealand Screwcap Wine Seal Initiative,” designed to promote and explain the virtues of the screwcap.

AUSTRALIA

Once everyone's favourite source of exciting new wines, Australia is suffering from consumer indifference especially at the prestigious end where they have been patiently and successfully working away for the last twenty years. The wines have not got worse, most have improved but customer loyalty was lost somewhere along the way. Retasting wines like the Dead Arm Shiraz from the 2001 vintage makes their relative neglect ridiculous. We doubt that there is better value for money in the whole of our list.

We remember the 1978 tasting battle of the premier wines of California and Bordeaux. It was inconceivable that the Americans might win then and now it's even more inconceivable that the grandes of Bordeaux would ever allow another such contest. Our wines come from small boutique wineries, where quality is all important. The wines are reluctant to hide their lights under any form of bushel.

CHILE

Chile seems to have replaced Australia for the supply of simple well made prices at a modest price. But they are not content just to make basic wines, try the Ninquen red.
